(Matthew 6: 21)

In the Bible, Jesus explains that one should store one's treasure in heaven rather than on earth; that is, if one places one's treasure in heaven that is where one's heart or attention will be. Jesus also warns that if one's treasure is on earth, one's heart and attention will also be on earthly matters, to the exclusion of God.

Exploring our Faith

"I will raise up for them a Prophet like you from among their own kin; I will put my words in [their] mouth"

As I had grown up in the 70's and 80's, when someone was described as "a prophet," I usually pictured a cartoon-like hippie with a robe and long beard carrying a sign stating, "The end is near!" Prophets had often been portrayed as people who were a bit strange and who predicted a future of doom and gloom. When I began working with adults and children preparing for baptism, however, I gained a deeper and more significant appreciation of the term. Did you know that when each of us was anointed with oil at our baptism we were consecrated as "priest, prophet and king?" A serious blessing for an adult let alone a child.

When we are anointed "priest," we become the body of Christ; the physical person through which others encounter and experience the risen Christ. As "king," we are anointed with the responsibility to look after the well-being of our fellow humanity. As "prophet," we are strengthened in our mandate to become messengers of God's truth in all that we say and do. In other words, a prophet isn't a predictor of the future, but is someone who is a voice and advocate for God's message to love, forgive, and seek justice and peace.

Even though we are all called by our baptism to live out this three-fold mission, we've all come to know of people who have excelled at this mission in a profound way. Modern-day prophets like Mother Teresa, Martin Luther King Jr. and Pope Francis continue to emerge within our world to remind us that there is still much work to be done before all people are able to live out fully their God-given potential and dignity. In their mission to be messengers of God's love and truth, prophets aren't always the most popular people because they make us look at our priorities and attitudes with an honesty that can make us uncomfortable. It's been said that "a prophet comforts the afflicted and afflicts the comfortable." They often bring into the light our selfish instinct to hoard and protect our privileges and they help us to open our eyes to how some of our comforts come at a detrimental cost to others. They call us to change in ways we're not always happy to give up. We have all become familiar with leaders of government and institutions who distort the truth for their own benefit or the benefit of a privileged few and if we are counted among those privileged, we can easily become convinced of the validity of their message. That is why our world will always need prophets who have the courage and conviction to speak out for those who are overlooked, rejected or abused by these false messages. While a prophet whose message is rooted in God's truth may not always be perfect, their message tends to be persistent and they speak, as Jesus did in today's gospel, with an authority and an integrity that is difficult to ignore. In the first reading, God assures us through Moses that God will never abandon us in a world of distorted truths and unjust leadership, but will always raise up prophets from among us to challenge us and help us to remain faithful to God's message of love, justice and peace.

"Prophets may make us angry and uncomfortable, but out of this discomfort comes a self-awareness, a God-awareness and other-awareness." * Once we are made aware, our baptism calls us to act; trusting that God is always there guiding and encouraging us.

CALLING YOUNG ARTISTS!!!

If you are 12 years old or younger, with some exceptions, please put on your creative cap! We need you to draw a picture of whatever comes to mind when you think of the word "baptism." Please draw and colour this picture and include your first name and age. Also, do the same for the word "Christmas". The idea is to make our own Christmas cards here in the parish grouping. Again, include you first name and age. Try to think more of crèches, mangers, stars, wise men, Christmas trees with angels, Mary, Joseph, and shepherds, etc. and less of Santa Claus when you do your brainstorming. You can drop off your creation in the collection basket on Sunday, at catechism, or any time during office hours.

Development and Peace Wins Ten-Year Battle for Justice!

Earlier in January 2017, the Canadian government announced the creation of a human rights ombudsperson for the Canadian mining sector operating overseas. This is important! This is something that Development and Peace has been asking of the Canadian government for the last ten years! It is cause for rejoicing! As Canadians, we all need to hold our mining companies, Canadian mining companies, accountable for human rights abuses committed while operating in countries of the Global South. And now these communities will have a voice!

So, on behalf of Rakotoarimanana in Madagascar, Eliza in the Philippines, Arturo in Honduras and all those who have lost their land, had their rivers polluted and seen their livelihoods destroyed, we want to say thank you! Development and Peace has been standing alongside them for the last 10 years in their struggle to have their voices heard and their rights respected and it's Canadian support (your support) for Development and Peace that has helped to achieve some justice in countries when Canadian companies operate around the world.
